MR. EDITOR:-A sensible writer He Talks One Way in Pricate and Another

And questioning to-night ? O tell me, dost thou look, this ever Upon my dear old home? Thou'lt find it girt by hills and trees, Where birds and zephyrs roam. Where Nature, in sublimest mood, Decked cliff and forest wild

In grand array, then set the seal Of beauty on her child. Didst thou not see the ferns along The public-hedded rill-The tall trees reaching heave Each undulating bill?

O moon, fair moon, didst thou not amile With joy and sweet delight, To find upon the furrowed earth A spot so pure and bright? O moon, pale moon, lot thy mild rays

> For to that home my heart is hound Their evening prayer to hear . O moon, fair moon, I cannot see I look on thee, and thou on them

> > Their precious home and mine; The same kind Pather watches us, The same stars o'er us shine. The breeze that cools my fevered b May fan their faces too, The same sun lights our busy day

"I look on thee, and then on them," What joy is in my heart; They seem so near, and doubly dear Let not the spell depart! I clasp their hands by faith, in mine, Our words are cheer and love,

According to the reports in the ington, the condition of the wheat Central Committee, by great effort, secured the promise of the State
